Guest Writing Guidelines

Thank you for your interest in writing for FemSTEM. We are so thankful that you feel like this is a place you would like to show off your work and your passion for all things Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math. Whether that's your personal story of working in the field, or some tips you learned from your schooling, or just a subject you're passionate about — it's all welcome here.

Here's a quick overlook of our guidelines:

- FemSTEM has the right to deny any post for any reason. This is just a general reminder that we are under no obligation to post anything you've sent to us. Whether we accept it or deny the post, we will let you know.
- FemSTEM has the right to edit your article. This means grammatical errors or fact checks. If something is changed, we will notify you.
- FemSTEM requires well-researched work. In an era of fake news that's all too easy to share, we will not just post anything. Your work must have been well-researched, and have good, reliable sources. Trust me, we'll know if it wasn't well-researched.
- FemSTEM does not pay for guest posts. This is not a writing internship, nor a job. Therefore, we do not pay, nor do we expect articles from you. You will never get prompts, nor will you get assignments. Guest posts are all voluntary.
- If we publish your work, feel free to put us on your resume! You got published on a website, and that's huge! Please put your work on your resume! You'll impress potential employers.

- We do not accept articles with cuss words. This website is aimed at women and girls of all ages, and therefore will not allow cussing in any articles.
- We do not accept articles about sexual relations. Obviously, the human body is something that is studied throughout various fields of science, but again, we are a website aimed at all ages, and we do not want to publish works about sexual relations.
- Any work with an enormous amount of grammatical errors, we will not accept. Grammatical errors happen; we understand. However, we will not ever accept rushed work.
- Please do not promote your website or social medias in your article - we won't accept it. We will promote you for you. Promise.

Thank you! We look forward to reading your submission.

Yours Truly,

The FemSTEM Team
